Step by Step

Supporting you to support them

Are you worried about someone's relationship, for example:

- their relationship doesn't feel safe or healthy?
- you've noticed changes in their behaviour?
- you've seen or heard things that don't feel right?

Trust your instincts, support is available for you.

Supporting someone in an abusive relationship can feel overwhelming.

You might not know what to say or how to help and that's okay. If you're worried about someone, please don't ignore it.

Talking, listening and staying alongside them can make a real difference.

You don't have to have all the answers, but we can help you think things through. Step by Step is here for you. We offer advice and support to help you understand what's happening and how you can help your friend or family member safely.

We're here to support you to support the person you're worried about.
